

(Influence of the environment on the development of the individual)
The environment is the sum of all external factors that influence the development of the individual. It includes the physical environment (climate, geography, etc.), the social environment (family, society, etc.), and the cultural environment (religion, customs, etc.). The environment can have both positive and negative effects on the individual. For example, a supportive family can promote healthy development, while a stressful environment can hinder it. The environment also plays a role in the development of personality and behavior. In summary, the environment is a crucial factor in the development of the individual, and its influence is both profound and complex.